CLOCK GOLF

PUTTING AROUND THE CLOCK

The majority of golf players, amateurs as well as professionals know how difficult it is to putt 1-3m, right? And if you would like to hit fewer strokes on the green and improve your handicap, then the shortcut is called ClockGolf – an elegant training course that invites you to have fun but certainly also tough competition.

This is how you play

ClockGolf is played on a 4.40m circular green with 12 start places similar to a clock. The hole is placed slightly off from the centre so the distance to the 12 tees varies – and the course can be installed with a decline, so the degree of difficulty is increased. Then it's just a matter of swinging your club. Practice makes perfect. And even champions practice.

It all began with kings

ClockGolf originates from 19th century England where royalty and nobles had great pleasure using the game as a party game. In Denmark, Queen Ingrid had ClockGolf installed at Gråsten Castle Park and the Queen, competent golfer that she was, apparently instructed her children and grandchildren in the noble art.

Green, green grass at home

The decorative 'clock face' is constructed in exclusive hand-hewn and highly polished granite and is available in grey and black. The numbers 1-12 are sand-blasted into the granite and can be covered with gold leaf or painted silver or white. The granite edge is 40cm wide and the artificial green is made of the best artificial turf available in Denmark. The installation is basically maintenance free, which only needs to be swept occasionally. Basically, ClockGolf can be installed anywhere. And if you're dreaming of a golf course in your garden, you are welcome to contact Teddy Pedersen, who besides ClockGolf also offers installation of putting greens according to the customer's needs and requirements, e.g. in the garden, in company grounds and hotels.
